Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The applicant's representative argues that the prior art of record fails to disclose "increasing the level of a winner by one and transferring a certain rate of credit from a loser to the winner, eliminating the loser from the tournament and matching winners having the same level and credits". Examiner respectfully disagrees. The prior art of Walker teaches a tournament which progresses by eliminating members that have not reached a certain level in the score. The "winners" progress in the tournament thereby increasing their involvement into the next level of play (ie: an increase in the level by one" and the "losers" are eliminated from the tournament". The money that was used to iniatially enter into the tournament is then passed on to the general pot which by the nature of the tournament will pass to the winner's pot. Thus the credit is given to the potential winnings of the winners and they are always playing opponents of the same level (ie: players that have reached a score or level in the tournament". In this situation the levels of the competitors and credits are different from one another but are within the same threshold as alowed by the progression of the tournament. This can be made analogous to the elimination of Texas Hold 'em where players that move forward bring along winnings received from losers and are eliminated and the remaining players have all progressed because they are above a threshold (ie: more than zero). In the cited example of Texas Hold 'em with each round of play those players that are not eliminated possess the same status of level and credits and is an inherent attribute in the arts. These qualifications are well known in the tournament arts and it is under this basis that the claims in how the prior art has been applied. Furthermore, the applicant's representative states that the prior art fails to match the same level players and an opponent on the same level. As shown in the arguments above, the instant claims are met by the currently presented prior art. It is recommended that the applicant's representative discuss and elaborate in the claim language what exactly is used to distinguish the use of level by the prior art of record and the instant invention and make the necessary amendments to present that view in future amendments.
